HUNTERS INJURED

At least 18 Virginia hunters have been injured, three of them fatally, in hunting accidents so far this season, according to reports received by the State Game Commission. "This is a little higher than the rate of a year ago," said safety Training Officer J. N. Kerrick. "But the percentage of fatalities is lower."

Last year 22 Virginia hunters were injured and nine others lost their lives in hunting mishaps. The 1961 cases, as in past years, reflect hunter carelessness. Four deer hunters were injured, one fatally, by bullets from the guns of unidentified hunters.

Two of the wounded hunters were struck by buckshot in the legs, and one was hit by a high-powered rifle bullet.
